Is Our President Ashamed of Our History?

D-Day:

Sent to me by one of our readers. Enhanced by my question at the beginning and end!

Every year, in France they have a 4-day celebration complete with American uniforms. They honor the Americans who died there.

June 6, 2015, was the 71st anniversary of "D-Day", the largest invasion ever, where 200,000 Americans stormed the beaches at Normandy to begin the final push to defeat Nazi Germany in WWII. D-Day marked the turning point in WWII in Europe. Today, European heads of state make it a point to recall and honor the sacrifices of those who landed in Normandy, as do most of our Presidents.

In the 71 years since D-Day, there are four occasions when our current President of the United States chose to not visit the D-Day Monument that honors the soldiers killed during the Invasion.

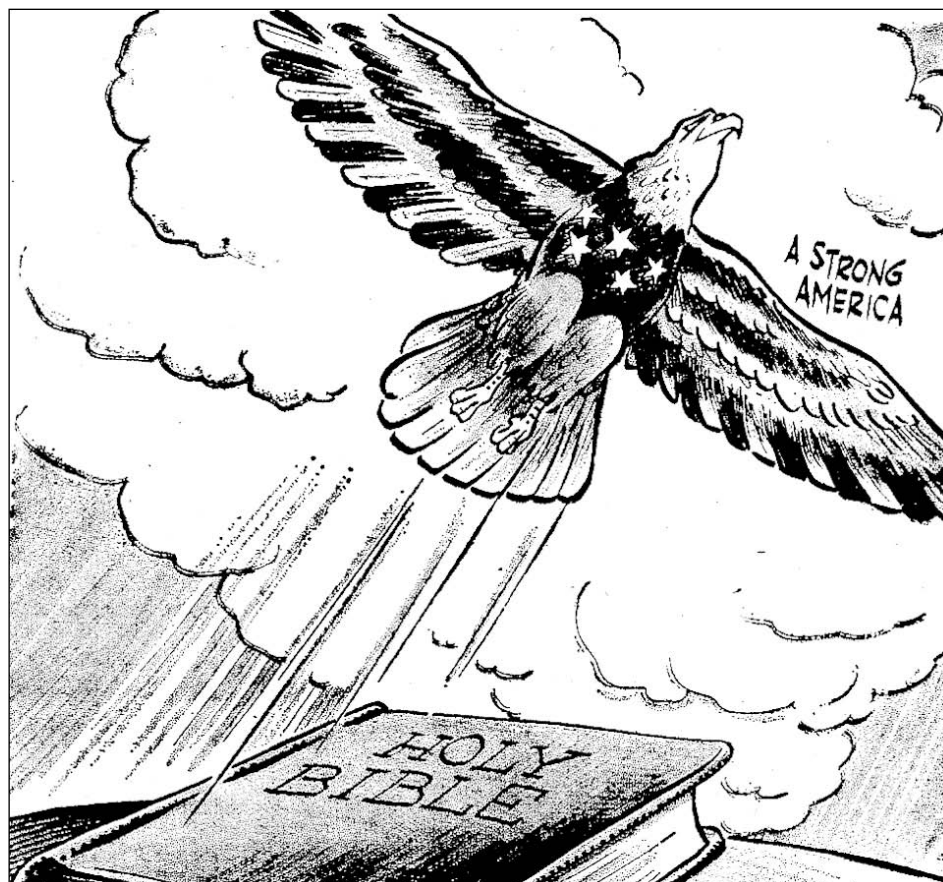

Barack Obama:

No attendance 2010, 2011, 2012, 2013

For 71 years, every American President except Obama has taken the time to honor the memory and sacrifice of the 6,000 American soldiers killed on D-Day.

I ask is our president ashamed of our history???

DENNIS K. BAXLEY

This summer, the Florida Legislature has been called into a Special Session in order to redraw Florida's Congressional Maps. In a two-week special session, the Legislature will assign millions of Floridians to new congressional districts as it works to obey an order by the Florida Supreme Court to reshape the political landscape. There are already measures in place to change Congressional and legislative districts every 10 years to reflect population changes, yet this will be the third time since 2010 that legislators will make changes to district maps. The U.S. Constitution prescribes that they must include the same number of people in each district and be as compact as possible. The new maps are likely to reconfigure nearly all of the state's 27 congressional districts, as every shift of a line has an extensive domino effect. This will open the door to new candidates and threaten incumbents, who will now face a new set of boundary lines and constituents close to the 2016 election. Continual map changes have resulted in unstable representation for several areas of the state, such as Sun City Center, who would get its fourth member of Congress in eight years. While Republicans and Democrats rarely agree on much, but in this we are in sync. The ongoing redistricting fiasco in Tallahassee should never happen again and the power of the court to dictate changes to districts must be curtailed.

Summer Slump

OCALA, Fla. (Aug. 21, 2015) – The July unemployment rate for the CareerSource Citrus Levy Marion area rose by 0.2 percentage point over the month to 7.0 percent, but is down 1.0 percent from the same time last year.

Out of a labor force of 194,451, there were 13,531 unemployed, an increase of 371 since June but 2,404 fewer than July 2014.

According to the employment summary released by the Florida Department of Economic Opportunity (DEO), Levy County continued to hold the lowest rate in the three-county area at 6.4 percent, followed again by Marion County with 6.6 percent and Citrus County at 8.0 percent. The comparative, not-seasonally adjusted jobless rate for Florida is 5.7 percent and the national rate is 5.6 percent.

DEO reports that unemployment rates increased over the month, though not by much, in 51 of Florida's 68 counties, remained unchanged in 12 and dropped in four.

"The summer slump' was bound to happen," said Kathleen Woodring, chief operating officer of CareerSource Citrus Levy Marion, referring to the seasonal increase in unemployment rates typically fueled by drops in public education and agriculture employment.

Woodring noted that while the expected uptick in the unemployment rate happened in July rather than June, it is something that takes place every summer regardless of the economic climate.

"This isn't anything to get alarmed about," she said. "The key economic indicator is whether we've improved over-the-year, which reflects the business cycle rather than seasonality. And the clear answer to that is yes."

Twenty metros experienced job losses in nonfarm employment since June while five reported gains. Over the year, 23 metros gained jobs, one lost positions and the Homosassa Springs Ocala Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) remained unchanged.

Nonfarm employment in the Ocala MSA was 97,200, down 100 jobs over the month but an increase of 2,800 jobs since July 2014, for a 3.0 percent growth rate.

The Ocala MSA's nonfarm employment growth rate was the eighth highest among the state's metro areas.

Six major industries gained jobs over the year in the Ocala MSA, including trade, transportation and utilities (+1,100); leisure and hospitality (+500 jobs each); education and health services, professional and business services, and manufacturing (+400 jobs each); and government (3600 jobs).

Industries losing jobs were other services (-200 jobs) and information (-100 jobs). Mining, logging and construction, as well as financial activities remained unchanged over the year.

The Ocala metros over-the-year job growth rate in manufacturing (+5.5 percent – the third highest in the state); trade, transportation and utilities (+5.0 percent – the fourth highest in the state); professional and business services (+4.3 percent – sixth highest); and government (+2.3 percent – fourth highest) were stronger than the statewide growth rates in these industries.

The employment report for August will be released on Friday, September 18.

CEP/OCALA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE NEWS

The 2015 Th!nk Local Expo will be held at the Klein Conference Center in the Ewer's Century Center at the College of Central Florida on Saturday, September 19, 2015, from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

This year's event will be bigger and better than ever, as we introduce a new twist to drive more attendance, more interaction with our attendees and participants, and more opportunities for connection within our community.

The Ocala/Marion County Chamber and Economic Partnership (CEP), in partnership with the College of Central Florida, will focus on our local business community. The importance of Buy Local, Eat Local, and Learn Local is integral to building community, strengthening local economy, shaping our character, increasing the wealth and health of residents, and creating jobs, opportunities, and choices.

A newly added component of this year's Th!nk Local Expo will include Learn Local—a DIY learning concept that has become popular in cities across the US, such as Skillshare events. Learn Local is a free learning opportunity focused on DIY experiences accessible to anyone that wants to learn, and to anyone that wants to teach. Classes are focused on learning by doing, interaction instead of lecturing, with topics covering a myriad of skills. Most classes will last between 1 and 2 hours and will take place in blocks throughout the day.

Also new to the Th!nk Local Expo this year will be a Eat Local campaign. Have you ever wanted to sample fare with friends from

Anchor Babies

Sent to me by a reader:

Read all about the 14th Amendment (click on the link below) as the debate over "anchor babies" rises up—get the history, not just the current hype.

Please, please please—get the information for yourself...and then inform others. This anchor baby policy is killing our nation's economy.

"In 1866, Senator Jacob Howard clearly spelled out the intent of the 14th Amendment by stating:

multiple food trucks? This is your chance! As a part of the push to Eat Local, we will invite Marion County food truck vendors to set up close to the expo.

Attending the Expo is free to the public, with easy access and plenty of parking.

"Every person born within the limits of the United States, and subject to their jurisdiction, is by virtue of natural law and national law a citizen of the United States. This will not, of course, include persons born in the United States who are foreigners, aliens, who belong to the families of ambassadors or foreign ministers accredited to the Government of the United States, but will include every other class of persons. It settles the great question of citizenship and removes all doubt as to what persons are or are not citizens of the United States. This has long been a great desideratum in the jurisprudence and legislation of this country."

"The original intent of the 14th Amendment was clearly not to facilitate illegal aliens defying U.S. law and obtaining citizenship for their offspring, nor obtaining benefits at taxpayer expense. Current estimates indicate there may be between 300,000 and 700,000 anchor babies born each year in the U.S., thus causing illegal alien mothers to add more to the U.S. population each year than immigration from all sources in an average year before 1965. (See consequences.)

American citizens must be wary of elected politicians voting to illegally extend our generous social benefits to illegal aliens and other criminals."

PUBLISHER'S NOTES

The administration has armed the Cartels, the Terrorist and Lord knows whom else, then they cry for gun control. They don't even know how to name the terrorist. If the terrorist is not Islamic terrorist then what the hell are they?

I have been studying political correctness.

The annalist and marketing gurus are saying to candidates "when using a picture of themselves on ads you should be smiling." I say if you are doing a serious job you should have a serious look on your face. Voters are rebelling. They are making a statement that they are disgusted with politics as usual. Is Trump Smiling? Some of the top polling Republican candidates are not career politicians and they're NOT SMILING. Voters are tired of the same old rhetoric. What do you say? tloury@att.net

The American way of life was to give an American a hand up not a hand out! I am sure there are people who need and deserve help, but two and three generations living on welfare? One woman on TV said, "Someone needs to take responsibility to feed my thirteen children!" Need I say more?

The picture on the front page was discovered stuffed in an old family Bible. It's a newspaper cartoon of an eagle launching upward off of a Bible. I thought some would like that, but of course my critics will have other views. The newspaper was closed down 40 years ago, but this picture lives on.

Last month I was criticized for writing about a bad guy that was shot by police, the man shot happened to be a person of color. The headline did not say "Person of Color Shot" it was information off the web and off other news sources. I'll take the heat because it comes with the job. But don't read something into my stories that is not there.

HERO?

You know since Trump has talked about who is a hero and who is not!

I think Trump is missing the point. The description of Hero could mean many things. The only way I know how to figure it out to put it in writing.

I think the ultimate hero is that person that throws him or herself on a grenade to save his companions. He or she died; Companions lived now that is the ultimate hero.

Saving a drowning victim. Rescuing a person from a burning house, different case scenario is heroism.

Being a prisoner of war is considered heroism, especially because of the punishment, mistreatment, hardship and starvation. Yes Mc Cane is a hero, just a different kind of hero.

Law Enforcement, Fireman, Life Guards, Hospital ER worker and many more do not consider themselves as heroes, but do what has to be done. They all save lives but are not always called heroes but they are heroes.

I think Heroism means different things to different people, so if someone is called a hero, thank them for what they did and move on, don't question it, you won't win!

When I was a child I was playing near the Rail Road Tracks with another little boy. I was badly injured, the other boy piggy-backed me a block and a half to a Fireman's House. The Fireman and the boy, I think they were both heroes, some yrs later in life I would reciprocate for both.

Acts of bravery are highlights in life for someone. Don't dilute it, feel good about it and again thank them and move on.

A little joke but so true! Reporter interviewing Obama.

Reporter: Why are you planning to grant amnesty to millions of illegals?

Obama: Because they will do the jobs Americans don't want to do.

Reporter: Like what jobs?

Obama: Like Voting Democrats.

September at Rainbow Springs

Summer is winding down and with the start of school weekdays will be less busy.

Tubing will be shutting down for weekdays after Labor Day Monday, but will still be open Saturdays and Sundays until the end of September when it will close for the season.

There will be a Butterfly Garden Walk on September 12, beginning at 9:30 am at the Butterfly Garden and lasting about 30 to 45 minutes. Learn from a Volunteer about the Importance of the variety of host and nectar plants and discover the caterpillars, chrysalises, birds, butterflies and pollinators living among the blooms. sity of Florida, Marion County Extension Agent how you can protect Florida's rivers and aquifer through adopting water conservation behaviors at home. Programs start at 10 am, refreshments provided.

Guided Bird Walks are on the last Saturdays in September through April, led by Volunteer and President of Citrus County Audubon, Fred Hileman, along with other birding enthusiasts. Meet in the Headsprings Entrance parking lot at 8 am. Beginners are welcome. Walk lasts about 1.5 hours. Bring binoculars, (a few pairs may be available for use) or other birding tools, good shoes for uneven, sloping walkways and water.

Seven Steps to Avoid Food Waste and Illness

(NAPSI)—If your family is like most in America, you've been throwing away about $2,000 every year. That, according to the USDA Economic Research Service, is the cost of what the average family of four throws away as spoiled or suspect food.

In fact, over 90 percent of Americans may be prematurely tossing food because they misinterpret expiration dates, according to the study by Harvard Law School's Food Law and Policy Clinic. Fortunately, you may not have to. The problem is, while you don't want to waste food—and money—you don't want to get sick from eating something rotten, either. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that each year, roughly one in six Americans (or 48 million people) gets sick from food-borne illnesses.

What You Can Do

There are, however, seven steps you can take to protect your money and your life:

1. Buy only from shops that follow proper food-handling practices.
2. Keep raw meat, poultry and seafood separate from other foods.
3. Don't buy food in cans that are bulging or dented or jars that are cracked or have loose or bulging lids.
4. Don't buy frozen food if the package is open, torn or crushed on the edges.
5. Before buying eggs, see that they're clean and not cracked.
6. Remember, perishable foods should not be left at room temperature longer than two hours.
7. Don't depend on your nose alone to tell you whether an item in your refrigerator is good enough to eat. That's where an ingenious new device can come in.

The world's first handheld, Bluetooth-enabled "electronic nose" has been created that connects with iOS- and Android-powered tablets and smartphones. It samples the air near the food you're concerned about and analyzes the sample using a different algorithm depending on whether it's testing beef, poultry, pork or fish. After extensive calculations in the cloud, it returns one of three possible results: fresh, cook well or spoiled. Independent laboratory testing found its results are 80 to 95 percent accurate.

This electronic nose is so much better than your human one because many of the volatile organic compounds emitted by spoiling food are odorless. As a result, meat and fish can be unsafe to eat but still look and smell okay.

Called the FOODsniffer, the device is available at <http://www.myfoodsniffer.com/> or by calling (800) 813-3712.

From the Office of THE MARION COUNTY SHERIFF

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Attorney General Pam Bondi and Marion County Sheriff's Office has arrested five suspects in a massive shoplifting ring targeting North and Central Florida grocery stores. According to arrest warrants, the suspects stole more than $50,000 worth of beauty, dental care, medical and other products from Publix and Winn-Dixie stores and then sold the items oneBay.

"This unsophisticated, yet massive effort to sell stolen goods online has produced strong evidence for my statewide prosecutors to bring charges against these individuals in connection with shoplifting products from nearly 100 Florida grocery stores," said Attorney General Bondi. "I want to thank Sheriff Blair and my statewide prosecutors for the great teamwork and the investigative efforts they put into this case."

"I'm extremely proud of the hard work and dedication of the detectives and deputies involved in this successful operation and the cooperation and partnership between the Marion County Sheriff's Office, and the Office of the Attorney General. Together, we have made our community, and the state, safer by removing these criminals from the street and out of our businesses. We will continue to take a proactive approach to fighting crime trends that are affecting our citizens and businesses" said Sheriff Blair.

The suspects allegedly stole products from nearly 100 stores in dozens of Florida cities. Each time, stealing between $100 to $1,400 worth of products including: whitening dental strips, electronic toothbrushes, shaving razors, allergy medicines, batteries and more. Most of the shoplifting occurred in June and July of this year.

A Sweet-And Effective-Way To Combat Mosquitos

(NAPSI)—Mosquitoes can be a big problem for small to medium-sized businesses. That's the word from experts who say mosquitoes are more than a nuisance. With growing concerns about the spread of West Nile virus, Chikungunya and other diseases, they can present a serious health threat to employees and, in many cases, to customers as well.

Fortunately, there are techniques for combating mosquitoes that are designed with businesses in mind. For example, a company that has been a leader in pest control for 85 years—Terminix—offers an exclusive solution with natural active ingredients.

Called the Attractive Targeted Sugar Bait®, or ATSB®, it is not a barrier or repellent. Rather, it is a solution that puts an end to the mosquitoes that can take over outdoor spaces. Once a month during mosquito season, a commercial service professional strategically treats nonflowering vegetation and other places that mosquitoes frequent with an environmentally friendly solution containing sugar from fruit extracts and encapsulated garlic oil that are safe around people, pets and food. "A sugary syrup in the bait helps attract mosquitoes to feed and the garlic acts as a gut toxin," says Stanton Cope, Ph.D., Director, Entomology and Regulatory Services, Terminix International. The mosquitoes are attracted to the bait, eat it and then die—more than 90 percent in the three weeks following an application.

Plus, it's effective on a wide range of mosquito types, including hard-to-control urban species (e.g., Asian tiger mosquito). And with monthly treatments, mosquito problems at your business will be greatly reduced.

Although the ATSB service is designed to deliver maximum effectiveness, it's safe around people and pets. It won't harm the environment either because the active natural ingredient is garlic oil.

When a company is in need of immediate relief from mosquitoes, Terminix Commercial can also set up what's known as a knock-down treatment. Used in conjunction with the ATSB system, it can provide quick results while the bait-and-kill solution becomes established.

Knock-down treatments may be applied every 21 days during the mosquito season

Print Will Remain Consumer's Choice Through the End of this Decade

From Link and Learn

It is rare for an executive in the publishing industry, when contemplating the next five years, to talk positively about print. Digital dominates industry conversations as publishers seek to transform their businesses and engage an audience of connected, readers.

Yet according to Ovum's new Digital Consumer Publishing Forecast, which quantifies the prospects for the global consumer publishing industry in the next five years, the resilience of print, despite the growth of mobile and digital consumption, may still be underestimated

With some marketers now confident to pay more to deliver their ads to the right audiences than they do for the advertising space itself, the emergence of extreme precision targeting is a sign that big data is beginning to live up to its immense hype. It is no wonder that Sir Martin Sorrell claimed we are now "math men not Mad Men".

How to Equip Your Kids For School

(NAPSI)—If yours is like most American families with kids in school, you’ll spend over $600 on clothes, shoes, supplies and electronics this year. Total U.S. spending on back-to-school is expected to be about $27 billion, reports the National Retail Federation.

Smart Supply Shopping

Here are a few hints to help you get the most for your money.

- First, shop at home. Look through desks, drawers and closets. Chances are, some of the stuff your kids got last year can still be used this year.

- Also, before you shop, try to find out which supplies the school requires. Depending on your child’s grade, this will probably include pens, pencils, markers, highlighters, erasers, rulers, notebooks, loose-leaf paper, scratch paper, binders, calculators, crayons and other art supplies. Also, a backpack to put it all in. Look for one with reflective material, a padded back and multiple compartments.

- Next, consider electronics. A laptop or a tablet might be a good idea; which device depends in part on whether it’s for productivity or for consumption.

Tablets are typically used to browse, watch and consume content. A laptop is used to create and produce, though there is some crossover.

Make sure your child understands the school’s policy on Internet use and communication and reinforce it at home. You should also see if the school provides any electronic equipment. If, say, tablets are used in the classroom you may want to get the same kind for use at home, or a laptop that’s completely different.

Consider getting accidental damage insurance. As AVG security analyst Tony Anscombe points out, kids tend to drop or damage stuff. You should also protect the device from hacking and viruses. One good way to do so is with one of three protection packages from AVG. AntiVirus Free—which is free—offers AntiVirus to help protect against viruses, spyware and other malware; Link Protection to scan Web, Twitter and Facebook links; and Email Protection to warn of malicious attachments. For a bit more, there’s an AntiVirus that does all that plus protects against harmful downloads with Online Shield; encrypts and password-protects private files with Data Safe; and provides automatic security updates. For a little more, you can also get Anti-Spam to keep your in-box free of spam and scams and an enhanced firewall so your kid can browse online with greater safety.

Whatever device you get, make sure your kids understand one core principle: If you wouldn’t say it off-line, don’t say it online.

“Not All Who Wander Are Lost”

Real Madrid? No... Real Galicia

My time in Spain was my first real taste of assimilating into another culture. Each day for lunch and dinner I would eat with Maria and her whole family. Maria was the only one that spoke English and rarely ever translated for me. Keep in mind that my whole purpose for being in Spain was to help tutor her to improve her English, so that she could travel to Ireland to find better work. Meaning: Even the most proficient speaker in the group was still quite limited in her abilities. I spent a lot of time listening and in quiet reflection.

Her parent’s house, Casa Penacoba, where I stayed was an old finca (a small working farm) that was built in the 1500’s and used as a bed and breakfast retreat. Spanish tourists mostly from the southeast (e.g. Alicante and Almeria with their more dry climates) would come to vacation for the weekend or longer. Galicia is in the northwest of Spain and is known for its’ more coastal and lush lifestyle. Most of the guests had been coming to Penacoba for the entirety of their teenage or older children’s lives. Occasionally I would get lucky and someone fluent in English would come to stay. One was an executive for Microsoft and had even been to Florida several times. Amongst the wonderful visitors, who were as good as family, the house had many wonders. It was a lovely mansion of a home, in a small valley overlooking the horse pasture and grape wines, with pipes cut straight into the mountain where the most pure water I have ever tasted flowed from. The house would make these newly built trendy homes designed to look old blush in embarrassment at the true elegance and grace of the real deal. On the back of the property was a huge iron mill that still worked. They didn’t use it anymore but Maria engaged the 20 foot water wheel to show me it one day. As a waterfall crashed through the back of the room and the wheels begin to turn, the huge 4 foot tall by 6 foot long fans began to pump air to where the hot fire would be. It was one of the most magical things I have ever seen as it was created by human hands more than 300 years before the idea of harnessing electricity could even be truly entertained. Plus it was such a massive machine room. Maybe 50 feet across and moving parts larger than myself.

I highly recommend that should you ever travel to Spain this wonderful guest home is where you want to spend your time. The environment is lush, green, surrounded by hills, while having all the modern comforts of Wi-fi (which in Spain everyone calls “we-fee”) a gorgeous pool, and satellite television in the lodge built for visitors to relax and socialize in. Most of the food is raised on sight. Including much of the meat, let me tell you. That was an awkward thing to walk in on the day that Maria’s sweet dear old mother, Reme, was boiling and plucking the chickens herself. She insisted I help but instead just let me get away with merely holding one, post- mortem, pre- “de-feathering”. Oh my! First time for everything?!

Maria wanted to make the most of my time there so she took me to many places. We saw a beautiful gorge, climbed a still operational 2,000 year old Roman lighthouse, went out to dinner with her friends to enjoy the favorite regional dish “Pulpo”- a boiled Octopus with only paprika and olive oil served with bread, and even took me to see a cremation (her best friend owned a crematorium). Her friends always seemed excited to meet an American and thought what she was doing (inviting a stranger into her home, was too curious not to have many questions). Certainly a wide array of experiences. The arrangement was that I would help Maria to improve her English and I would have free room and board in exchange. But, I always felt like I was getting away with the better end of the deal. So I would help out with the small things where I could. I once insisted to Maria’s father, Manolo, to let me help cut the corn stalks by hand, hot and time consuming work, so they would grow ears of corn properly. However, this was about the extent of my chores.

The culture in Spain was wonderful, much more similar to America than Denmark or anywhere else I had been. The people were friendly, loud, and very social. People wore bright and flashy colors like in America. In Denmark I stood out like a sore thumb as a tourist for having bright pink running shoes.

“Not All Who Wander Are Lost”

People wear black on black on black in Copenhagen like they're auditioning for a part in the "Adam's Family". While in America it's nearly impossible to find muted colors these last several seasons, and Spain was this same way. And their exuberance for bright fashion was also mirrored as I watched them exist socially. There was a joke in Denmark that you could close your eyes in a restaurant and forget there was anyone in there with you as they are so quiet- equally, that they could always identify the Americans. But in Spain the street corridors are packed with people socializing, exercising and playing. No one sits inside a building to eat or have a drink and tapas really are what used to be the equivalent of bar nuts. Small a la carte portions of full size meal items, giving you the option to really try it all. I can't wait for this trend to catch on and permeate all over America ALSO with the same low price points as Spain has!

During the summer there are festivals nearly every weekend it seemed for another saint or other random city festival. This meant that when we would stay the weekends in A Coruña, a north-western coastal city on the Atlantic I was able to hear the concerts still playing down the street until 4-5 o'clock in the morning. And while the children don't stay out quite that late, to see a couple children playing on the sidewalk while their families sit outside the cafes until 1 am was not uncommon. Children there were very much integrated into the adult social society; meaning, they were more a part of their parents' lives, rather than in the U.S. where parents lives are more organized around the children's.

Spain is still my favorite place that I have traveled to thus far. This is due to the warmth and friendliness of their culture (everyone made me feel like or called me, family), the wonderful weather (reminiscent of San Diego), the low cost of housing and similar cost of living as America, the beautiful cities and countryside, and overall the more laid back and communal forms of living. I highly encourage that if you ever want to see "real Spain" and not just Madrid and Barcelona (I also visited there too) to visit the city of A Coruña and its gorgeous coast line and history, and stay with the family that I call my own at Casa Penacoba in the hills of Galicia. If the price point is too high I at least encourage you to google both places so that you are able to fabricate some wonderful sweet dreams about the places that so lovingly stole my heart.
